WARWICK BROWN -- RACE CAR DRIVER

Although only 25 years old and racing but five years, Warwick Brown has accomplished a lot in such a short period of time. He began his racing career in his home territory of Australia in 1970 behind the wheel of a Brabham BT-18. Over the next few years, he drove McLarens and Lolas. Now, he's piloting the Talon MR-1A from McCormack Racing Enterprises in the Formula 5000 Series.

Despite an accident in 1973 which put him in the hospital for three months, Warwick went on to establish the lap record for the Australian Grand Prix in 1974 where he was leading until a blown engine took him out 15 miles from the finish. In 1975 he walked away with the Australian/New Zealand Tasman Championship.
